James 1:2–4

Consider it all joy, my brethren, when you encounter various trials, knowing that the testing of your faith produces endurance. And let endurance have its perfect result, so that you may be perfect and complete, lacking in nothing.

Read James 1:2–4

Trials are not pleasant, but God uses them with purpose. Like a pearl formed through an unwelcome wound, enduring faith is often shaped through pressure, patience, and the healing work of God.

1. According to James 1:2–4, what do trials produce in the life of a believer?

2. Why is it important to be settled on God's goodness before suffering comes?

3. How does hardship reveal what we truly believe about God's character?

4. What wound, irritation, hardship, or disappointment do you need to surrender to the Lord?

5. How does the cross remind us that God has not remained distant from suffering?

Consider

An oyster cannot produce a pearl without first being wounded. In the same way, God can use unwelcome things to form enduring faith in us.

Anchor Thought

We must be settled on God's goodness before the story asks us to trust Him through pain.
